Dear Mr President,

Just a few weeks ago I saw you giving your remarkable speech at BOCA University in Florida, just by chance while visiting Oxford in England. What is very amazing, looking back at other US Presidents, is the fact that you Mr President are the only one of the Presidents who in public tells the listener about his private life, something that many world leaders could learn from. I am not writing because I am pro-American, but surely in a few more months, the people in the USA will have to decide on either re-electing you as their President or someone new.

Seeing that you have great experience working with homeless and unemployed in poor communities on the south side of Chicago before you were elected in 1996 to the Illinois State Senate, I am still today receiving emails of the problems surrounding homelessness and unemployment in parts of the US.

Just a few days ago, I managed to finish your book "The Audacity of Hope" your second book, which I would recommend to everyone and especially in schools. Here your personal life and struggle as well as your goal as President ("thoughts on reclaiming the American dream") are very important messages not only to Americans, but to the world.

On another note, I am a bit confused about all the information we receive from the Press around the world. I often wonder about the G8 and the G20 Summit, and lately the words "Triple rating Status" of some countries. For many of us, these terms tell us very little. Very little is known about the Summit, and what this really means to our everyday life. Before the world financial crisis and depression, you never heard on the news of a country's "Triple Rating" going under. I am wondering , why can't these terms be more simple, so we can understand this, just like you have explained about the Maytag plant in Galesburg in your book, This sure would make this more digestible for the man in the street.

With Europe, USA and other parts of the world in recession, things are not looking great at the present time and with rising unemployment and homelessness an economic change of direction for the future is needed. As I have written to Mr Michael Gorbachev, am very concerned about the social economic climate in Europe we are living in today. It is my view, that a new "FORUM of World Leaders" should be formed into a new "think tank" that will be actively engaging and developing strategies to help us on the road to world economic recovery. My plan is that this new Forum of world Leaders would do this voluntarily, to help mankind. Looking around there are quite a number of retired brains around the Globe, including a few UN Secretary Generals, a number of Economic heavy weights in Europe, World bankers, just to name a few.

Finally, I know that you have a lot more to offer, and how time flies, as it seems only like yesterday you became the President of The United States.

It is my hope and sincere wish, the people of America all read your second book, before November.

It is my sincere hope and wish you will be re-elected this year again.

By the way: I know you are quite busy, but I hope another book is not too far away.

Sincerely yours,

Billy
